SACRED CONVERSATIONS: CREATING A FAITHFUL DIALOGUE ABOUT WHO WE ARE

"If one member suffers, all suffer together with it; if one member is honored, all rejoice together with it." 1 Corinthians 12. 26.

As a pastor, have you been seeking an opportunity to address the lives of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) people in your congregation but haven't found it? As a lesbian, do you want to let your minister know about your life and challenges but are afraid you'll be rejected or not understood? Do you have a transgender son and are seeking a safe space to reconcile your faith with your love for your child? Have you wondered how to get your congregation to address the relevant issues effecting people in the community, including issues effecting LGBT people? If you resonate with any of these scenarios or if you simply want to learn more about how to have sacred conversations about religion and LGBT people, this workshop is for you.

The Human Rights Campaign's Religion and Faith Program and JASMYN, Jacksonville's organization serving LGBTQ youth, is proud to feature Steve Kunst and Cheryl Stuart, for our sacred conversations workshop. Steve and Cheryl, come from the Evangelical Lutheran Church of American in Tallahassee. They are powerful storytellers trained in helping people engage in often difficult conversations about sexual orientation and gender identity in ways that honor our faith traditions and our relationships with one another. Please join us for a powerful workshop that will empower you to bring needed conversations to your faith community. Light refreshments provided. All are welcome.
